is the science of calling to the attention of the public the things they or you want.

Advertising tells who you are, where you are, and what you have to offer in the way of service or commodity.

MULHALL'S EXPOSE AND LABOR

The remarkable story being recited by Colonel Martin Mulhall, formerly a field agent for the National Association of Manufacturers, is bringing forcibly to the attention of the country some of the things against which organized labor has had to contend. It is also directing the gaze of a critical public toward the magnificent character of labor's chief, Samuel Gompers.

The bitterest enemies of Gompers and his policies are now forced to admit they have always held him above suspicion. Even those who have criticised and condemned him because of his efforts to preserve harmony between capital and labor wherever possible now candidly state they always believed him immune to contamination at the hands of the swine of the Manufacturers' Association. The New York "Call," a constant critic of the President of the American Federation of Labor and his policies, says: "Whatever differences we may have with Mr. Gompers regarding his general policy, we have always regarded him as a clean man, nor is it for one moment supposable that he would for an instant listen to the infamous proposition put up to him."

The Brooklyn "Eagle's" Washington correspondent in a lengthy discussion of the lobby of the American Federation of Labor, which labor's enemies are now trying to daub with the same paint used on the Manufacturers' Association, says: "Now, in all this there is not necessarily any suggestion of improper influence. There is no cringing about this lobby; it is confident, assertive and senses its power. It does not hesitate to clash with other lobbies, and it does not hesitate to warn public representatives who have been elected to Congress that they will be opposed for re-election by labor interests if they vote for measures which are not favorable to those interests. It is not an extravagant statement to call the labor lobby the most powerful in Washington. It has a record of achievement which sustains this statement. It is not modest concerning this achievement, nor does it regard it as anything to be hidden or kept quiet. The labor lobby, in large part, is quite open in its methods. It is here all the time. It never sleeps. It is on the job when Congress is in session, and when it is out of session. It is vigilant, resourceful, aggressive and persistent."

All this would indicate that the Civic Federation has had no influence upon the labor officials who have taken part in its deliberations, and that there is no begging and cringing on the part of labor for desirable legislation in spite of the loud assertions of some of those within our ranks.

In order to clearly demonstrate the difference between the labor lobby and the crooked, putrescent institution maintained by the Manufacturers' Association, the American Federation of Labor has volunteered to furnish the congressional investigating committees with all books, papers and files.

The labor lobby, of course, would not stoop to bribery and deceit in order to produce results, but even if it should, Mulhall's testimony shows conclusively that the manufacturers' lobby could raise thousands for every dollar labor could possibly put into such a contest. An organization as shameless and unscrupulous as the National Association of Manufacturers, and with its vast resources behind it, is not to be outdone in bribery by any body of men no matter how lost to decency and honesty its members may be. The revelations of Mulhall concerning the methods of the association in purchasing legislators and other officials, brings strongly to the front the fact that labor men, because of their ethical training and discipline, are better able to stand strong temptations than is the average citizen sent by the people to our national legislative halls.

Before the investigation now being conducted is closed the people of this country will know those among their representatives who, while ostensibly working in the interest of the people, have really been in the pay of unscrupulous business interests. So far as the investigation has proceeded but one man of national importance from a labor standpoint has been placed in an unenviable position, and that one Congressman McDermott of Chicago. The other labor men, both public officials and labor officers, have so conducted themselves in the face of major temptations as to merit the highest commendation of the labor movement and of the people of this republic generally.

The general manager of the Manufacturers' Association, while denying the truth of Mulhall's assertions as to the use of money in gaining or throttling legislation, remarks that if they had desired to do business that way it would be no trouble at all to raise from twenty-five to fifty million dollars. Mulhall says they did spend large sums for these purposes, the money passing through his hands, and he furnishes official letters and other documents to prove the truthfulness of his statements.

The Parrys, Kirbys, Posts and Otises hear these statements without a blush of shame, simply shouting "liar." While Mulhall's own admissions brand him as a liar, traitor and degenerate, circumstances and the documents he presents compel the belief of a very large portion of his testimony as against the unsupported denials of men who are palpably beneath him in probity. Even if but a small portion of the "field agent's" testimony should prove true it is sufficient to show the squalor and the mire in which the association would force labor to abide if that institution could force its ideas upon us. It is also sufficient to show the filthy depths to which the leading officials of this despicable association will burrow in order to crush organized labor and pile up profits. No trick is too vile, no creature too low and no crime too degraded for use by them if the possibility of gaining profits is present.

Organized labor has long known the material of which the Posts, the Parrys, the Kirbys and the Otises were made, but the general public has not been so well informed concerning them. Thanks to President Wilson's remark about an "insidious lobby" the entire world now sees them in their true light, garbed as creatures of hades of the most disgusting type. Truly it does seem "murder will out" even when protected by massive walls of filthy lucre.

Let the investigation go on and go to the very bottom of the filthy ditch. It will be productive of much good for all of the people by showing them "who is who."

THE LOBBY CHIEF.

By Gilson Gardner, in Cincinnati "Post."

A more important man than Col. Mulhall, who exposed the gigantic lobby operations of the National Association of Manufacturers, is Jas. A. Emery, nominally its attorney in Washington, but in fact director of all the National Association of Manufacturers' operations.

Mulhall was a field agent; Emery was, and is, the general in command!

He has an office in the Union Trust building, near the White House. He makes the policies, outlines the campaigns and gives the orders, which are carried out by the field agents.

Emery has a beautiful country residence on the Conduit road, just outside Washington, where he entertains Senators Root and Lodge, ex-Representative Watson, Senator Townsend of Michigan, with others who sit in the seats of the mighty.

Emery never goes to the Capitol himself—he sends for people!

They come to him!

He knows Congress and its membership—he tells his agents how to work.

Listen to the following from the private archives of the National Association of Manufacturers, addressed to one of his lieutenants:

"The legislative situation at Washington," he says, "will become clear only when you realize the personal position of the average Representative. Our Congressmen proceed to Washington from every part of the United States. Their term is so short that almost before grateful congratulations upon election have died away a nerve-wearing struggle for renomination is in progress. The Congressman is, therefore, almost continually engaged in a contest to retain his seat."

Emery then gives a remarkably enlightening prescription for up-to-date lobby work. He says:

"Then your Congressman desires to help his constituents and his party in such a way that he will help himself. He performs in Washington; he lives in his district. What he thinks his district thinks is a great factor in shaping his conduct, just as what his district thinks he thinks is the great factor in securing his election.

"But a small percentage of the people who vote for him give intimate care of his public action or communicate with him concerning it, and if he heeds those who heed him it is because he has every reasonable ground to assume that those who endeavor to influence his action will taken an equal interest in voting one way or another in his future election, and if an unusual number of people address him upon a particular subject it is very easy for him to believe that they represent a large and interested sentiment in his community."

Emery, therefore, advised that a stream of letters and "sentiment" be directed upon Congressmen at the psychological moment!

The official—but private—records of the National Association of Manufacturers to which your correspondent has secured access show that the following are among the bills opposed by this lobby:

Bill providing right of trial by jury or other judge for contempt of court, measures prohibiting or regulating the employment of children, bills limiting the hours of labor on government work and bills proposing amendments to the Sherman Anti-Trust act.

In a confidential report to members the work of the National Association of Manufacturers in one State is described in a way which throws light on its character and is suggestive to other States:

"Last winter there was but one obnoxious bill that escaped us. We assisted in formulating laws for the State of Indiana and we succeeded in preventing objectionable legislation, and I say that it behooves each one of you in your own

State, especially those who live in capital cities, to organize and be ready for such work as this. Your local organization can send out information over the State.

"Take such a bill as the child-labor bill. The glass manufacturers are greatly interested in that bill. When a child-labor bill is under consideration the word is passed out and these men come down there and can tell the members of the Legislature all about it—how children work in glassworks—and in that way we realize the benefits of the organization over the State."

Following is from official sources. Emery said: "I want to say that the southern commercial bodies did something that has never been done in connection with anything we have ever attempted down there (Washington) at any time in the past. For instance, at the time the Hepburn bill was introduced, John Sharp Williams, minority leader on the floor, during his filibustering tactics, said that they would help the President amend the Sherman Anti-Trust law, that they would help him pass the Hepburn bill, and they made a big fuss about it.

"After we got in touch with the southern organization and brought this statement to their attention—twelve days after that—Mr. John Sharp Williams went before the American Academy of Social and Political Science at Philadelphia and delivered the most drastic and bitter criticism of the Hepburn bill that has come out of the mouth of any public man. In that," concluded Emery, "he showed a marvelous facility and adaptability to circumstances."

Ferdinand C. Schwedtman, one-time secretary to the National Association of Manufacturers, in a press statement, is quoted as saying:

"I admit all of the (Mulhall) allegations save one. We paid the expenses of organizers in many congressional districts in the hope of electing men who were favorable to our principles. If that is a crime, then we are guilty."

To which the answer is:

Unfortunately it is not a crime. It ought to be. Whom is a Congressman expected to represent—his district and its people and sentiments, or any outside influence that may import money and organization to elect him?

PRESSMEN AND FEEDERS.

In the strike of the Press Assistants' Union for an increase in pay the men have strengthened their position during the past week by inducing five of the strikebreakers who had some little ability to abandon their places and leave the city. This has left the Franklin Printing Trades Association offices in a much more crippled condition, because they have been unable to secure many competent mechanics to take the places of the men out on strike.

A number of the firms are continuing their policy of remaining closed and refusing to employ non-union men. They say they are not willing to entrust their valuable machinery to the care of such incompetents as the association has been able to recruit and prefer to let their plants remain idle until the strike is finally set-

In spite of the statements issued by the secretary of the Franklin Printing Trades Association to the effect that the offices are being filled with mechanics, the fact remains they are unable to turn out work of the simplest character and are daily losing customers to the fair printing establishments which are being conducted on a nor-

It is also denied by the association that there is a six-weeks' limitation on the bonds which bind its membership, but information at hand, and the refusal of some of the members to open their establishments with strikebreakers, makes it almost certain that at the end of six weeks the union men will be called back to work at the increased scale of wages in many of the association offices. And when this is done it will cause a scramble among the more stubborn members to get their skilled men on the job.

Without regard to rumors and statements by employers, the unions have them defeated and the strike will not last much longer.

The Press Feeders' Strike Is On

THE FACE OF ANDY FURUSETH. By Carl Sandburg.

Thousands of politicians, actresses, society women and persons reaching eagerly for publicity are trying to get their pictures into the newspapers.

In every city are anxious, respectable people filled with the fond hope that some day their photographed faces will gaze out from a newspaper page.

"Not for me," says Andy Furuseth. "Get away from here with your cameras."

He has a reputation for having smashed more cameras than J. Pierpont Morgan.

Andrew Furuseth, President of the Coast Seamen's International Union, has battled and builded more than twenty years for his organization. He is a picturesque fighter, a curious character, a unique American figure.

But a picture of Andy has never been seen in the papers.

Several dozen times the newspaper photographers have moved up towards Andy and shoved a camera toward him. But each time the machine was hauled away at the threatening command of the sailor leader.

"Three husky fellows with cameras, all carrying loaded revolvers, are on your trail and will get a picture of you this time," said a reporter to Furuseth in a Chicago hotel recently.

"Somebody may be killed before it is over," he answered.

And one year when Andy stood up in the California Federation of Labor convention, a photographer took a flashlight picture of the delegates-with Furuseth making a speech and his right hand extended in violent gesture.

He turned instantly and pointed a quick forefinger at the camera man. "Destroy that photograph; if you print it, I will make trouble," he shouted. And it was so done.

Year after year, Furuseth has been going before Congress, trying to get a bill passed abolishing involuntary servitude on board American vessels. The sailor who signs a year contract is just as much a slave for that year as the American negro was before the Civil War.

The ship may owe the seaman six or ten months' wages. But if the seaman leaves the ship without permission, not even asking his wages, he gets the handcuffs and the steel bars for his. This is what Furuseth has been trying ten years to end.

He takes only seaman's pay as "salary" from his union. When he attended an international seaman's congress in Europe a few years ago, he worked his passage across, rated as an ordinary seaman. He sleeps in a sailor's bunk at the San Francisco headquarters. He has never married, explaining that a sailor is a slave without a home to share with a woman.

In every American Federation of Labor convention, his lean, crouched figure rises. His eyes glow. His face is screwed with intensity. His shrill voice tells of the seamen's fight for better things. They all watch for the time when Furuseth is going to get the floor.

Such, briefly is one of our notable American citizens who has blocked all efforts to get a picture of him into the papers.

"Bill" Mahon, president of the street car men's Amalgamated Association, has in his home in Detroit a photograph of Andy Furuseth. It was secretly given to Mahon two years ago by a newspaper editor who was afraid to print it.

Fureseth has found out about it. He threatens he will get a squad of sailors and go to Detroit some dark night and make a raid on Mahon's house.—"La Follette's Weekly."

Mayor Rolph has assured Stationary Firemen's Union that an eight-hour day for firemen employed at the city pumping plants will be inaugurated on August 1.

"OUR COUNTRY."

At the banquet to celebrate the independence of the United States in Lucerne, Switzerland, Louis Lombard, member of the Musicians' Union, responded as follows to the toast "Our Country":

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: In 1877, one year after landing in America, I saw on the Pennsylvania Railroad train after train of oil cars set on fire by strikers, and I witnessed much rioting. At that moment I feared the country just beginning to be mine was already coming to a bad end. It has thrived wondrously ever since. I did not know then that even prehistoric man had had his squabbles over the spoils of a hunt, and that labor disputes had occurred and shall probably recur at all epochs and

"We lead the world in all experiments and it looks to us for experience. More than once have I heard from the lips of foreign statesmen: 'We are watching your country to learn what to do and what not to do in our own. We are learning at your expense.'

'Many of our experiments have been expensive. However, how could one be but optimistic on this birthday of our marvellous Republic among so many of her lovely daughters?

"We are young, enthusiastic, fearless, and at times we speed upon unsafe ground; but it is thanks to these attributes of a healthy, hopeful, courageous youth that we generally succeed where the old and timid often fail.

'The darkest days in our history only reflect the better the brilliancy of our horizon. Mighty struggles, even deep wounds-wounds which seemed fatal-have left us stronger and wiser.

"No lasting good is gained without pain. Had our colonists lived in peace and plenty, would they have evolved the great United States? We should thank the Red man for having thrust upon us the bitter art of war. Had England treated us generously, we would have remained an English province, and our manifold activities, pregnant with good for all mankind, could not have received so strong an impulse, so deep an inspiration as under the free Stars and Stripes. Had not brother been pitted against brother in a civil war, slavery might still blot our name. And, this very day, were the means for dishonest money-getting uncurbed and the just demands of labor unheeded, worse than panics and strikes would occur.

"Let us rejoice today. Exports beat their fabulous record. Our natural wealth, our inventiveness and public spirit continue to bring forth limitless blessings. Our labor is all employed at the best wages in the world's history, and our railways gross and net earnings are greater than ever. The nation's fortune will increase this year by ten billion dollars from our farms, and our factories will turn out twenty billion dollars of "The Panama Canal is opening. We remain a peaceful nation of hard workers; our wars with Mexico and Japan are already over at the sole cost of printer's ink. And the budget is not burdened with a big army, because no power, nor coalition of powers, would ever dream of permanently invading our soil. The advent of eternal peace may be remote; meanwhile we are learning to arbitrate rather than have wars or strikes -conflicts usually costly to both sides. Our Constitution has endured, our Supreme Court holds the respect of the world, and we can rely, as in the past, upon the intelligence and fairness of the majority of our citizens; benevolent forces that keep us from going far astray while enabling us to progress, not alone for the benefit of our people, but also for the advancement of humanity.

"Our Country, 'tis to Thee, Land of the noble free. To Thee we drink!"

FRIDAY, JULY 25, 1913.

The Southern Pacific Company, in attempting to evade the terms of agreements entered into with their trainmen and conductors, is facing a possible strike. The trainmen and conductors have already voted to strike in the event the Company persists in its refusal to abide by its agreement with them.

Because the National Cash Register Company contributed $50,000 to the relief of the flood sufferers in Ohio there is now a move on to induce President Wilson to pardon its president, who was sentenced to a year in jail for violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law at Cincinnati last fall. His case is now pending on appeal.

A union man and a member of a union should mean the same thing, but the truth is they do not. The union man is consistent and honest. He stands for all of the principles of unionism, including the union label. The mere member of a union is a hypocrite who attempts to deceive his fellows by paying dues and dodging all the duties and obligations of unionism.

The "Industrial Worker," published in Spokane, Wash., by the Industrial Workers of the World, in its last issue, has this paragraph: "Complications in the affairs of the 'Worker' having been the subject of consideration at the meeting of the General Executive Board held in Chicago, June 30th to July 4th, it was decided, no member dissenting, to suspend Walker C. Smith as editor of the 'Worker,' on charges that his general behavior tended to injure the prospects of the paper and work detrimentally to the I. W. Comment is unnecessary as it is only another instance.

The daily press has been vociferously praising the Newlands amendment to the Erdman Act as a great achievement. The new law establishes the "United States State Board of Mediation and Conciliation" to consist of a federal commissioner of mediation and conciliation, and two other officials of the Government to be designated by the President. This Board could be appealed to to intervene in a railroad labor dispute by either party, and would first use its best efforts by mediation and conciliation, to bring the disputants to an agreement. Failure would be followed by an attempt on the part of the Board to "induce the parties to submit their controversy to arbitration," and in case of arbitration special boards of either three or six mediators would be chosen by the railroads and the employees. Arbitration under the new law would be taken on only after a definite agreement had been made by both parties to abide by the decision of the arbitration board for a stated period. Whether this law will produce the desired results only time can prove.

THE ACCIDENTS OF INDUSTRY

The assertion has often been repeated by those in a position to know that 90 per cent of all the accidents of industry are preventable, and there can be but little doubt as to the truth of the statement, because there is hardly any form of accident incident to industry that can not be avoided by the exercise of proper care and the use of necessary safety devices.

The last session of the California Legislature passed a law calculated to both compensate the industrially injured and guard against the crippling of the workers, but opposition to the measure immediately asserted itself among thoughtless employers and some greedy casualty insurance companies. The dislike is, of course, founded upon a narrow and incompetent comprehension of the measures so far as the employers of the State are concerned, for no compensation law can be satisfactory, in the end, to either employer or employed, that does not provide for compulsory compensation and State insurance. Casualty insurance companies are organized for profit—naturally and necessarily they take advantage of every technicality to evade the payment of compensation due. The plan of State insurance adopted is solely for the purpose of acting as a leveler and preventing unfair advantage being taken of either the injured worker or the employer. There is no intention of driving the insurance companies out of business. The casualty companies have all too long dictated to the employer as to whom he shall hire and discharge, the rate he shall pay and numerous other conditions. The employer who has refused to comply with their requirements, of whatever character, has been refused insurance and sometimes, in this manner put out of business. And, when he has complied, he has frequently been called upon to discharge workers who refused to allow the insurance adjusters to defraud them out of compensation to which they were justly

The new law is designed to do away with all species of injustice and give to all parties interested fair, honest, just treatment. Insurance by the State, stable, with no incentive to discriminate in order to make profit, insurance at reasonable rates and promptly and honestly paid is provided for in the law. With these things no honest man will find fault, whether an insurance man, an employer or an employee.

There are those, however, in this State who object to justice and square dealing and they are doing everything possible to secure signatures to the petition which is now being circulated for the purpose of having the law submitted to the referendum. It is said misrepresentation and fraud are being resorted to to gain names of voters for the petitions. It is not even faintly hoped that the law can be defeated at an election, but if enough signatures are secured it can be held up until the next general election a year

The California Employers' Federation is back of the move to hold up the operation of the new law. These men care nothing about the justice of the scheme, the one dominant thought being their own profits. They well know that the tremendous slaughter of industrial slaves can be stopped at small cost, and that much poverty and misery and degradation can be wiped out through the same instrument, but they also know that it is now a little cheaper to kill and injure workingmen and women than it is to protect them by installing safety devices, and they have decided they prefer the spilling of the workers' blood to the sacrifice of a small portion of their profits. This has been the policy of the employer throughout the ages, but the world is really wiser now. Human life is sometimes valued more highly, even by employers, than are profits, and as a direct result many of the wrongs of the past are being remedied in the interest of humanity.

In the ranks of those striving for a better world, the people of California occupy a foremost position, and it is earnestly hoped they will not allow themselves to be deceived into attaching their names to the petitions now being circulated by the minions of greed throughout the State for the purpose of gaining another year in which to prey upon the workers. Our warning is that you be careful as to the petitions you sign. Offer these craving money-grabbers no encouragement whatever.

Fluctuating Sentiments

We are in receipt of a rather belated copy of a publication by Lillian Ruth Matthews of the department of economics of the University of California on "Women in Trade Unions in San Francisco." We have not yet read it except extracts printed in other papers.

Moving pictures are now being shown in this city of the licentious and barbarous Nero at the circus and the nude woman tied to the bull's horns as the titanic struggle goes on between the wild animal and the man of superhuman strength. Crowds go to see the helpless Christians devoured by the hungry lions as depicted in "Quo Vadis." One is almost convinced that there is still a bit of the savage left in human nature when crowds go to see such sights. But just about the time conviction of this is fastening itself upon you the same people will rudely rouse you with deeds of genteel mercy. For several days a young kitten whined out on a rafter, out of reach, on a new concrete building in course of construction. The kitten was apparently starving and pitious were its pleas for assistance. In the face of the suffering of this dumb animal strong, powerful men with no outward indications of either heart or nervous system demonstrated by their efforts to save the little animal that they possessed hearts as tender as the petal of a rose. Truly the human family is beyond analysis, wholly enigmatic. Don't judge the people you meet on the instant, you may make a mistake.

Over the Eleventh avenue pavement, white with dust in the scorching summer noon, rumbles a huge truck for conveying columns and beams of structural steel. It suggests the skeleton of a dinosaur mounted for a museum, with its long, square timber, for a spine, connecting the two pairs of great wheels, and the ponderous load of riveted metal hanging in chains low to the ground. The driver, an athletic young fellow, with a union button pinned in his slouch hat, plus the two leaders of his four-horse team toward the sidewalk, where a low iron watering trough invites the animals' thirsty throats. When the first pair have drunk their fill, he urges them forward until they step carefully over the trough to let the rear pair reach the water, but a crossyoke, to which their collar chains are attached, prevents one of these horses from thrusting his fumbling muzzle into the pool. As soon as the driver notices the animal's baffled effort, he hastens to drag the bar out of the way, and holds it across his knee with his foot resting on the trough's rim, until the gulping, sweating throat is satisfied. The driver's bare, muscular forearms, with full veins swelling under the burnished skin, are the same rich shade of brown as the neck of the bay horse outstretched beside it to reach the water. And on his face, all the time that the animal is drinking, rests a benignant, unconscious smile, not distantly akin to a mother's as she gazes down at her infant eagerly drawing from her breast; it is the fairest and most moving sight that the city has gladdened me with today. And as the handsome, bronzehued teamster climbs back to his high seat, and, gathering up his reins, skillfully brings his invigorated horses past the trough again, till they resume their course down the shadeless, ugly thoroughfare, he leaves the watcher standing long in gratitude for refreshment given his spirit no less than to the animal's parched throats .-Eliot White.

COURAGE. By Herbert Kauffman.

'Tis not because of muscled meat We place men in the master's seat; We do not reckon toughened thew, Nor breed, nor creed, nor bulk, nor hue, The force with which the anvil rings, Nor care how hard the hammer swings; The might in brawn, the strength in bone, Can never serve success, alone; Think you 'twas Spartan steel and skill That saved Greece from the Persian will? Think you Horatius won the day And held the bridge through nimble play Of sword? Or when all Europe lay Cringing beneath Napoleon's sway, Twas better guns and cannon-balls That swept the fields and crumbled walls? All that was splendid in every age Was written by valor on history's page. Giants in pigmy guise, Prophets with groping eyes; What matter sight or size When men build to the skies? What matter numbers, years, If we disdain our fears?

It is not always in the most distinguished achievements that a man's virtues and vices may be best discerned; but very often an action of small note, a short saying, a jest, shall distinguish a person's real character more than the greatest sieges or the most important battles .-Plutarch

Passes Eight-hour Law.

Senator La Follette's bill providing for an eight-hour working day for women, and safeguarding the health of females employed in the District of Columbia, has been passed by the Senate without opposition, it being favored by the District Commissioners. This same bill passed the Senate during the second session of last Congress, but failed to get through the House. The bill provides that no female shall be employed in any manufacturing, mechanical or mercantile establishment, laundry, hotel or restaurant or telephone or telegraph establishment or office, or by any express or transportation company in the District more than eight hours in any one day, or more than six days or more than forty-eight hours in any one week. It further provides that no female under eighteen years of age will be permitted to work in any of the business institutions above noted before 7 o' clock in the morning or after 6 o'clock in the evening of any one day, or will be permitted to work more than six hours continuously at any time in any establishment or occupation named in which three or more such females are employed without an interval of at least three-quarters of an hour. Time books are required to record the working hours. Proper inspection is provided, and severe penalties imposed.

Garment Makers Strike.

At Philadelphia a large number of men and women estimated at 5000 members of the Ladies' Cloak and Suit Makers' Union, are on strike. About 200 factories are affected. The strikers are demanding higher wages and a betterment of working conditions.

Puts Blame on Road.

The Interstate Commerce Commission's report of its investigation of the accident occurring on the New Haven and Hartford Railroad at Stamford, Conn., on June 12th, in which six passengers were killed and twenty injured, holds that the responsibility for placing an inexperienced and uninstructed engineman in charge of a high speed passenger train rests with the operating officers of the railroad. The commission also found that the home and distant signals at Stamford were too close together. Officials of the Department of Justice assert that the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission excoriating some features of the management of the railroad and its alleged monopolistic tendencies would be of assistance to the government in determining whether the corporation should be prosecuted criminally or civilly, or both, under the Sherman Anti-Trust law. In turn the railroad shifts the responsibility for the wreck to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. The officials of the road claim that the brotherhood objected to an order issued to the effect that spare engineers with less than two years' experience or two years rating as engineers would not be allowed to run through passenger trains, and claims that this order was protested by the engineers on the ground that the company did not adhere to the rule of giving an engineer thirty days notice before amending existing rules, and further claiming that the engineers offered the rule which is now in effect providing instead of two years' experience the requirement of one year.

Boycott? No!

At Lancaster, Pa., a letter has been sent to the members of the Master Plumbers' Association of Pennsylvania by its secretary in which attention is called to the fact that some members of the Master Plumbers' Association are employing men from other cities who are on strike. This letter in part says: "I have been informed that some of our members have employed men from Reading, who are on strike. Is this loyalty? Is it just to the members of the Reading association? You all know how loyal they have been toward the other associations when in trouble. I have been informed by the Reading association that this is a fight to the finish. The public is with the master plumbers and are helping them to the extent of holding back their work and not forcing them to hire the journeymen in order to finish up their contracts, and it is up to us as members of the central to give them all the support that is in our power. Protect your interests by employing men from your own city, and then you will be sure not to get any who are on strike. Tell your customers of the situation in the nearby cities, and they will be only too glad to put up with the delay in getting out their work." Plumbers, together with Plumbers, together with a number of other building trades crafts, are on strike in Reading for an increase in wages. This letter from the secretary indicates the plan of campaign adopted by the master plumbers. Whenever a labor union institutes a boycott it is illegal and un-American, but the employers have no synonym for this designation when they employ similar tactics.

Molders Win Out.

The iron molders have secured a splendid settlement in Philadelphia. Conferences were held between representatives of about thirty foundries and representatives of the five local unions located there and an amicable agreement was The minimum wage heretofore has been $3.25 for molders, which has been increased to $3.40. The rate for coremakers was $3.10, which also was raised to $3.40, thereby eliminating the differential in the wages of molders and coremakers. On and after January 1, 1914, the rate for both molders and coremakers will be $3.50, the agreement being operative until January 1, 1915. The agreement also provides a basic piece rate of $4.25 in lieu of a 10 per cent advance asked for for all piece workers. There are seven clauses in the agreement, among which wages, arbitration, and shop conditions are provided. The molders employed on stove plates are not included in the agreement, as they are covered by an agreement with the Stove Manufacturers' Defense Association, which has been operative for many years and includes about 20,-000 molders and affecting 95 per cent of the output of stoves and furnaces.

ORPHEUM.

Gus Edwards will introduce next week at the Orpheum "The Kid Kabaret." It is one of the most pretentious of vaudeville offerings and contains a cast of twenty juveniles with Eddie Canter and Georgie Jessel at their head. It is a musical melange suggested by the present Cabaret craze. All the principals sing, dance and impersonate in a clever and entertaining manner, and their efforts as comedians are quite up to the best adult standard. Miss Jane Connelly and her company invite you to join them in "A Strong Cup of Tea." It will be served in the ornamental garden attached to the quaint little cottage where Betty makes her home, and Miss Connelly as Betty, Mr. Donald Fraser as "Billy" and Mr. Erwin Connelly as "Billy's" father invite the audience to join them. A delightful quarter of an hour's diversion consisting of song, dance and story will be furnished by Fred Watson and Rena Santos. Brent Hayes will play selections without any accompaniment, conveying to the audiences the idea that they are listening to two or three instruments. Next week will be the third and most positively the last of the engagement of Miss Irene Franklin. She will sing entirely new songs. With this program Pat Rooney and Marion Bent; Lamberti and Miss Orford and her wonderful elephants will close their engage-

THE POWER STRIKE.

There has been during the past week little change in conditions in the light and power strike, neither side apparently having gained or lost anything, except that word has been received to the effect that an employment agency which has been endeavoring to recruit strikebreakers in Seattle has lost its license.

At the meeting of the license committee of the Seattle city council last Monday morning the application for renewal of the license of the Portland Employment Office, Seattle, Wash., was rejected.

Evidence was submitted by witnesses representing the Seattle police department, the Electrical Workers' Union and this organization proving that the employment office had been conducted as a strikebreaking agency for the Ballard shingle manufacturers and electrical concerns of San Francisco, California. Also that the Portland Hotel, in which the employment office is located and operated by the same management, is a refuge for immoral women, and liquor had been sold without a license after 1 a. m., Sundays and election days. The evidence given by the three officers of the police department was the most damaging.

Lewis, the proprietor of the employment office, now threatens to conduct a free employment office, and thus evade the license requirements of fee-collecting agencies. If this move is made, action will be taken to close the entire house, which, with the evidence already submitted by the police, can easily be accomplished.

J. W. Murphy of Springfield, Ill., secretarytreasurer of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers-the Reid-Murphy factionarrived in this city Sunday morning to look over the strike situation. He said that the purposes to make inquiry into conditions and to take up the strike from its inception several months ago, making himself familiar with all the details that led up to it, before making up his mind as to what course he shall pursue.

Mr. Murphy will remain in the city for some weeks and render all possible assistance to the California organizations of the craft.

The Labor Council last Friday night voted favorably upon a recommendation of the executive committee that charges be preferred against Electrical Workers' Union No. 6 (McNulty) for making and publishing untruthful statements concerning the council.

GLOBE THEATRE.

The addition of Edison's marvelous moving and talking pictures to a program of selected photo plays makes the admission price of a dime look like a quarter at the Globe. An excellent program has been arranged for Sunday, July 27th, including a beautiful story entitled "Home, Sweet Home," in two reels.

The story runs as follows: A successful man and his wife wanted his father and mother to live with them. The old home was sold; so was the furniture and the old horse, and into town they moved. How uncomfortable and unhappy they were! But they got everything back and went home again, and-well, its the kind of story that works straight into your heart and leaves your eyes misty. The Lubin players appear in the sure-fire success.

A MERRY WAR.

Reports from various sections of the country are to the effect that the whilom leaders of the I. W. W. are embroiled in an internecine war over the distribution of funds collected for the purpose of spreading the propaganda of that organization. While advertising itself as an industrial organization it appears that there are many divisions within its ranks and that the leader of each division is struggling to make himself the bright particular star. Crimination and recrimination is now the order of the day, and there seems to be no limit to the possibilities of these industrial panacea mechanics in their field of industry.

ONE-MAN STREET CARS.

The Kewanee, Ill., street railway system, in order to squeeze the last farthing from the public, operates electric cars with only one man to a car. This individual is motorman, conductor, flagman, switch tender, window cleaner, charwoman, etc., and frequent accidents occur as the result of placing too heavy a burden on one man. Recently an accident occurred on one of the cars and the employee operating it was immediately discharged. The local labor paper severely criticises the company.

SOME FIGURES FOR HEADS OF FAMILIES TO THINK OVER

BEING URGED TO SETTLE.

The United States Department of Labor has sent Louis F. Post, Assistant Secretary of Labor, to Boston for the purpose of making an effort to settle the seven weeks' strike against the B. F. Sturtevant Blower Works and the Becker Milling Machine Company, of which Governor Foss is the principal owner. The representative of the Department of Labor will urge that a settlement be made either through conferences or by an arbitration board.

TYPOGRAPHICAL TOPICS.

After a long illness, James J. Johnson, a veteran printer of Sacramento, died last week. Johnson worked in the State printing office under State Printers Johnson and Shannon. Johnson was a native of San Francisco and was 54 years old. The funeral was held in San Francisco.

Pursuant to the by-laws, the regular semiannual meeting of the stockholders of the Allied Printing Trades Club for the election of three (3) directors, and the transaction of any other business, will be held at the club rooms, 46 Geary street, (third floor), on Thursday, July 31st, at 2:30 o'clock p. m. Notice of any and all proxies shall be filed with the Secretary before said meeting convenes.

Charles Hertenstein of St. Louis is doing some I. T. U. work in Texas, and we clip the following from the Houston "Labor Journal": "W. F. Clarke, Tom C. Millis and Organizer Hartenstein, while motoring from Seabrook to Houston in Mr. Clarke's car, met with an accident. The car was almost a total wreck, but luckily none of the party was injured."

Secretary Michelson is desirous of ascertaining the whereabouts of the following members: W. E. Noonan, Harry B. Wiese and A. S. Mc-Elhinney.

As a result of the strike of the local pressmen and feeders' unions, the label of the Allied Printing Trades Council has been withdrawn from thirty-nine offices which heretofore have been union in every department.

The label has been restored to R. H. Halle, linotyper, from whose office it was removed by the Allied Printing Trades Council because of an infraction of the rules, which upon investigation proved to have been an inadvertence.

Charles F. Wolters, superintendent of the W. N. Brunt Company's plant, is spending a threeweeks' vacation at Lake Tahoe, accompanied by

Terry Evans, well known to fame as a striped bass fisherman, has deserted the salt water sport. rumor says, and is now depleting the Truckee river of its finest specimens of rainbow and other

Richard Burnett of the "Call" chapel and Mrs. Alice Hawkes were married last Tuesday evening at the home of the bride. An attempt was made to keep the wedding secret, but the information has leaked out. The contracting parties are both well-known in the printing trade and are receiving the congratulations of their large circle of friends. The "Call" chapel presented them with a handsome silver service. They will make their home at 1002 Ellis street.

George M. Buxton, in the employ of Shannon-Conmy Ptg. Co., while taking an automobile trip with Dr. and Mrs. Best, Sunday, the 20th inst., met with quite a serious accident in alighting from the machine. He tripped and fell, striking the back of his head on a piece of sharp curbing, resulting in concussion of the brain. They were on their way to visit Mr. and Mrs. Ormsby of Alameda, at whose home Mr. Buxton is now confined. He is under the care of a physician and cannot be disturbed, fearing an internal hemorrhage.

It is a long step toward individual freedom when the opinions of other people cease to disturb us; when we are content to let other people differ from us and are able to rest assured that the right will triumph in spite of human opinion. -Mary Stanhope.

PORTOLA FESTIVAL.

A big force of men is working might and main on the greatest night pageant ever prepared in America, to be one of the principal features of the Portola Festival of October 22nd to 25th. Cruising through the streets of San Francisco, reproductions of twenty vessels, giving the history of the marine development of the world, will fire cannon balls of confetti over the holiday crowds and flash messages to the seven seas from real wireless telegraph apparatus.

This feature is to be especially elaborate as the fiesta will commemorate the 400th anniversary of the discovery of the Pacific Ocean by Vasco Nunez de Balboa.

This night pageant, with the ships outlined in electric lights and manned by lads from the Yerba Buena Naval Training Station, will include thousands of costumed revelers between the floats. The crews will be garbed according to the period of their ships, ranging from the trireme of the ancients to the latest dreadnaught, including Columbus' Santa Maria, a Viking ship, men of war of the era before steam, one of the clipper ships that helped build up California, and such modern developments as the submarine and the torpedo

The ships will engage in a broadside battle lasting two hours, every gun firing each half minute. A total of 3360 shells will be fired per hour, exclusive of the rifle engagement of the marines. Showers of confetti will be scattered over a wide area at each shot.

THE GEARY-STREET ROAD.

The municipal railway is daily piling up proof that the public can operate its street cars far more satisfactorily than can private corporations. Private interests, previous to the building of the road, held constantly to the position that the municipality could not carry on construction or operation save at great loss to the taxpayers, but the reality has compelled them to change their tune and find other arguments against public ownership.

San Francisco is going to go ahead with the municipalization of its street car system as fast as the means can be provided and as existing franchises will permit. It has demonstrated to the satisfaction of the people the feasibility of municipal ownership and operation and next month they will vote the $3,500,000 bonds for extensions in spite of the wailing of the representatives of the private corporations. They know what they want and will not be fooled by falsehood and trickery.

Practically all demands of the union were conceded by the Newspaper Publishers' Association.
